How to do it:

Technical Secondary School, Most, Ecology squared

→ How to encourage students to be more interested in environmental protection? The teachers at the secondary school in Most, Czech Republic, decided to focus on this topic and teamed up with two Norwegian organizations. They plan to undertake couple of workshops to exchange their experiences with the teaching of this complex issue. The project will result in a set of innovative methodological materials which will be used in the modernization of the school's curricula. The aim is to involve the pupils in the discussion and strengthen their responsible approach to the environment.
